

GHOSTS

Humberto Poidomani's artwork is marked by some very peculiar characteristics and one of the most important is its mysterious silhouettes, better known as "the ghosts". The artist is always concerned with the problem of identity, self-existence and individuality of the human being, and is constantly studying the knowledge of himself and the relationship with others.

The constant presence of mysterious silhouettes is his representation of reality versus the appearance of the world.

Phrases, numbers, illegible calligraphy and the artist's humor and irony are constantly reflected throughout his artistic work both as a painter and as a screenwriter.

We all have ghosts, and they represent the things that we carry inside; our past, our present, fears and desires.

HP wants us to identify and confront them. He wants us to have them in front of us in our homes and offices so that we learn to live with them and control them instead of letting them control us.
